Matthew 12:50

AUGUST 2012

Dear Friend,

As we move into what should be the heart of the summer, we continue with our attempt at reading the gospels in sort of chronological order, so that we might get some idea of the life of Jesus.

I hope that the fact that this way of reading through the gospel passages (which means that we jump around a bit) does not put you off, nor cause you any great confusion. But as the different gospel writers often chose different moments in our Lord's life to write about, and because they each had different reasons behind why they wrote their gospels, it is not an easy task to join them together in a seamless flow.

However, I believe that it does reward us as it gives us a different perspective on the events that have been written about, and this in itself may enable us to see different aspects of the life of Jesus. Pray that God may open up these gospel passages to you as you read through them.

In His name
Martyn
