FEBRUARY 2013

Dear Friend,

As we continue our Old Testament readings, we finish the book of Esther before reading the prophecies of Joel and Malachi (the last of the minor prophets for us to cover). After that, we move on to begin reading Isaiah, the last of the prophets for us to focus on, and one of the few books that we have not read yet.

In the New Testament, we finish our re-reading of the Acts of the Apostles, before moving on to read through the letters of Paul.

As with the gospels previously, we will attempt to read these epistles in approximate chronological order. We shall do so assuming that all thirteen of the letters that are attributed to Paul within the New Testament are actually written by him. However, it is important to note that there is considerable debate amongst scholars as to whether he was the author of them all.

As ever, I pray that God may open your heart, eyes, and mind to His word, His will, and His calling, as you read the Scriptures day by day.

In His name
Martyn
